cultivation and methods of heat treatment of organic products.

Selection of breeds or species of farm animals, taking into account their adaptive abilities and resistance to diseases, creation of conditions conducive to the preservation of their health, veterinary well-being, natural reproduction, and ensuring optimal sanitary and hygienic indicators of their maintenance.

- Check the presence on the packaging of the mark of organic products of the unified pattern, the right to use which arises from the results of certification according to GOST 33980-2016.

The unified state register of organic product manufacturers of the Ministry of Agriculture of Russia

The form and procedure for using a graphic mark were approved by Order No. 634 of the Ministry of Agriculture of Russia of November 19, 2019 "On approval of the form and procedure for using a graphic image (mark) of organic products of the unified pattern".

- Check the QR-code in the product labeling, which should provide the ability to read information about the manufacturers of organic products and the types of their organic products, contained in the unified register of organic product manufacturers, using technical means.

The history of the development of organic production

Since the beginning of the XX century, alternative methods of agricultural production have been developed mainly in Northern Europe.

The beginning of organic agriculture was laid in the first half of the XX century by the lectures of Rudolf Steiner (1924).

The term "organic agriculture" was first used in 1940 by Lord Northbourne in the work "Look to the Land", which became the basis of modern scientific organic agriculture.

The term "organic agriculture" is legally enshrined in English-speaking countries. The term "biological products" (biological agriculture) is used as an equivalent in Italy, France, Portugal, and the Netherlands, in Germany, Spain, Poland, and the Czech Republic – "eco-products" (ecological agriculture), in Finland – "natural products" (natural agriculture).

The Codex Alimentarius Commission (FAO) provides the following definition: "Organic agriculture is a holistic production management system which promotes and enhances agroecosystem health, including biodiversity, biological cycles, and soil biological activity. Taking into account the fact that regional conditions require locally adapted systems, special attention is paid to the application of rational management practices, which are preferred over methods of using input factors of non-agricultural origin. In order to solve a specific task within a given system, this is accomplished by using, where possible, traditional, biological and mechanical methods as opposed to using synthetic materials" (The Codex Alimentarius Commission, 2001).

The activities of RusQuality

On the basis of RusQuality, the national competence center for the development of organic and "green" products has been established and operates, including Technical Committee for Standardization, the certification body for organic producers, an educational center, as well as work on strategic planning for the development of organic production.

The work of the center not only allows to create a domestic market of organic products, but also helps domestic manufactures of environmentally friendly agricultural products to enter international markets.
